TOPSMEAD STATE FOREST

Located in the Litchfield Hills of Connecticut, Topsmead State Forest remains a precious piece of a past era. Miss Edith Morton Chase's summer estate is defined by its magnificent landscapes, grounds, fine craftsmanship of her cottage, and formal gardens. With over 510 acres of forests and meadows, this hidden gem offers year-round passive recreation including walking, picnicking, bird watching, and cross-country skiing. In addition, the Edith Chase Ecology Trail offers close to a mile long walk with interpretive signs. Dogs on a leash are welcome. (Note: open fires and grills are not allowed).

Free guided tours of the residence are offered from June through October on the 2nd and 4th weekends of each month from 12:00 PM-5:00 PM.

Hours 8:00 AM – Sunset year-round

A BRIEF HISTORY OF TOPSMEAD

In 1917, Edith Morton Chase received 16 acres of land on Jefferson Hill in Litchfield, Connecticut from her father, Henry, First President of Chase Brass & Copper Company of Waterbury, CT. Here Edith built a rustic cabin, which was later replaced by a more substantial English Tudor summer home, designed by noted architect Richard Henry Dana, Jr. The exterior is made of cypress, the downspouts are copper, and the interior woodwork is oak.

Fine craftsmanship and an eye for detail are evident throughout the cottage. This summer home was furnished with 17th and 18th century English Country antiques. In 1927, Miss Chase purchased the adjacent Buell Farm to reflect its location at the "top of the meadow."

In 1972, Edith Morton Chase left her estate, and over 510 acres of magnificent forests and meadows, to the people of Connecticut -- to be known as Topsmead State Forest. Miss Chase requested that Topsmead State Forest be "kept in a state of natural beauty."
